

WINLESS HORNETS MEET MONTANA MINES TODAY

SAINTS HUMBLE HORNETS 13-0

By Earl Halverson

Two passes and a sluggish Eastern offense gave Carroll College a 13-0 win over the "Yellowjackets" last Friday night.

It was Carroll's second league win and puts them in a first place tie with Western at Dillon for the Montana Small College Conference lead.

With nine minutes of the first quarter gone, McGinley passed to Christensen on the Eastern 35. Christensen then outraced the Hornet's secondary to the end zone. Weaver kicked the point.

Midway through the fourth quarter, Christensen crossed the goal line from eight yards out, but a penalty nullified the touch-down. On the next play, McGinley pitched to Christensen, who took the ball in the end zone. A bad pass from center halted the try for the extra point.

The Yellowjackets completed several ground-gaining plays, but as in past performances, lacked the power to score.

Eastern Prepares for Mines

Packey's Patter

Here are a few of the questions that have entered my mind as I look over the results of EASTERN'S three initial grid contests. If there were obvious answers to these problems there would be no need for a solution because they would be already solved. But let's look at them anyhow.

Has the platoon system of substitution worked for EASTERN? If not, why do we use it?

Why didn't we have a pass defense to stop the combination that spelled our ruin at Helena last week?

Are our offensive and defensive teams capable of doing their respective jobs?

Is timing the reason that our offense has failed to click?

A speculative answer to those questions rests in the fact that our potentially great grid aggregation has not had an opportunity to polish its force. As we go to press, there seems to be little possibility for our offensive teams to have developed timing to the desired degree. The advisability of platoon substitution for a school of our size is still a matter for theorization. But let's wait until we see the team in action before we cry too loud.

One bright spot in the sports picture is our hoop quintet. For the first time in years the basketball team should outshine the 'Jacket grid record.

'Til next week when the Hornet eleven shall have cured the sports editor of being pessimistic.

KATOYA MEETING

The behind-the-scenes work of drama was carried on in full force Tuesday when 21 members of EASTERN'S dramatic club, Katoya, gathered together to do the necessary odd jobs for the fall production. Five new applicants were received who joined with the others in building flats, arranging costumes, working on curtains—doing everything to make "Craig's Wife" outstanding.

The meeting was completed in the cafeteria where under the influences of chocolate milk, cake

EASTERN PLAYS FIRST HOME GAME

By Robert Carbone

EASTERN'S Hornets will be going all out in an effort to find the win column as they open their home schedule against MONTANA MINES from Butte, Friday night at Daylis Stadium.

Kick-off for the Hornet-Oredigger clash will be at 8 p.m. All week Oscar Bjorgum, Eastern grid mentor, has been keying his club for this contest, but the snow has prevented extensive outdoor practice.

Batting a flat zero with three defeats in as many starts, the Yellowjackets face a rugged Butte eleven led by tackle Akins. Comparative scores give the Hornets a slight margin over Mines, judging by the outcome of clashes with Western at Dillon.

The Hornets have one of the toughest defensive squads in the conference but are weak on offense. Against both Dillon and Carroll several Eastern scoring drives were halted just short of pay dirt. If Bjorgum can come through with some more score-punch, the Yellowjackets will make it tough for Mines; but if the present situation continues, chances for a victory Friday are rather slim.

and peanuts the many good points of the play, "Craig's Wife," were discussed.
