PROSPECTORIAS

FAREWELL DON AND KNOBBY

Congratulations and farewell to Don Sullivan and Don McKenna, former editors of THE PROSPECTOR, who have answered the nation's call to service. To these outstanding young men, we offer our heartfelt thanks for a job well done and our best wishes for a bright future. During their respective terms as editor-in-chief they did much to improve and assist the publication. We hope, that like their four fellow alumni in the service, they will distinguish themselves serving the nation just as did they during their student days. We trust that Lee Thomas and Robert Garden will always remember the Prospector motto and let it be their guide. May they have courage to do their important work well; may they keep their honor bright; may they be of great service to God and Country; and may they always revere Carroll and all she stands for.

TWO TASKS

"To be confused is to be weak and to be weak is to be lost." These words by an ancient philosopher could be well heeded by some Carroll students these days. There are those among us who are expressing confusion over their position in the war. They are heard to say, "What's the use? I can't work. I don't know where I'll be from one day to the next." These men should indulge in a little introspection and straighten out in their minds what their purpose and real goal are in this fight for freedom.

Each of us has two well-defined jobs to do; first a sincere and concentrated effort to get as much education as possible before Uncle Sam brings in the call of active duty, and, second, an uncomplicated qualification in the general collective effort for our nation.

These two tasks, if they are performed as they should be, will keep us busy enough that we will have little time to express confusion over our immediate or ultimate objectives.

SCOOP!

To Charles D. Greenfield, THE PROSPECTOR is deeply grateful for the story about President Taft in connection with the history of the college. This story is printed for the first time in the "Freedom of Worship" will be the subject of this week's speech to Congress on January 6. Mr. Taft's recent book, "The Promise of America" is being well-received by students and faculty. Mr. Taft has been working on this project for the last eighteen months, using his Vermont neighbor as a consultant. The book contains a list of things he considers to be the "Freedom of Speech." This week the "Freedom of Worship" will be discussed in the college chapel.

NUGGETS

Times have changed at Carroll—Where we once heard "What do you go, Joe?"... "When do you go, Joe?"

Wife with a thirst for gore
Nailed the baby to the door
Mother said with humor quaint
"Willie, dear, don't be so uptight."

Dutch and Dick were walking down Main Street—

Dutch: I'm hungry.

Dick: Well, come on, let's eat up some lunch.

Duck: Naw, I ain't that hungry.

Then there's that one about the moron who found a new way to hunt rabbits—but he'd just hide in the bushes and make a noise like a carrot.

The Original Paintings will tour the country in a war-bound drive, and afterwards will probably hang in the nation's Capitol. These are the first of American portraits of ideals which this country has stood for since 1776. The project is sponsored by the War Department, and the great artist, satellite to the idea, will not receive any appreciation and it is generally agreed that they are second to none.

"Four Freedoms"

Commencing with last week's issue, and continuing for four consecutive publications, the "Saturday Evening Post" in its Cover story, "Interpretations of the "Four Freedoms"" in the American World" is being featured. The first was the "Freedom of Speech." This week the "Freedom of Worship" will be discussed in the college chapel.

"Congratulations Doctor.
