WE AND VAN.

Vanderbilt had millions, many, many have I.
Some have millions, some a penny.
Wonder why?
Yet despite his countless treasure
He could buy but little pleasure;
And he, when he hoped for leisure
Had to die.

Some men every waking minute
Dote and strive,
For the fibre that is in it
Push and drive.
Vanderbilt, let naught retard him,
He had never checked nor married him;
Without eyes I regard him
Envious!

Trists of Ye Editor.

To run a paper without occasionally publishing an item that is detrimental to some persons is like running a railroad without having accidents or mishaps. To do either is a physical impossibility. No man on earth is so great an extent constantly at the mercy of both friends and enemies as the editor of a newspaper. He must get much of the information concerning transpiring events second or third hand, or not at all. Frequently statements are received from supposedly trustworthy sources which are subsequently found to be without foundation.

Not one editor in a thousand will fully injure either friend or foe by misrepresentation. Go to him and ask for a correction, and nine cases out of ten, if your case is just, you will be received politely, and proper correction will be made with pleasure.—The Fourth Estate.

Quartz mining in the vicinity of the Big Hole moves slowly and owners of prospects do not seem to get action on their properties. They should not expect to sell their claims when wholly undeveloped, and the mining around the stores this winter will not go for much when a big sale is on. Steady and well directed work will do the business, provided there is a mine.

It amuses us to see some of our exchanges squirm in an attempt to offend nobody. The newspaper that can be published in a way not to offend any one is a jewel, and the editor is entitled to a pair of gold wings. Human nature is so constituted that some like scandal, while others don't; some like to see others "wipped up the back," others don't; some like fakes exposed, others don't; some like to have the truth told about them, others don't.

The republicans carried the election in Ohio by a large majority, Bryan carried his state with a fusion ticket, Maryland flipped over into the democratic column, Kentucky

The War in South Africa.

Disastrous as the news coming from the Transvaal may appear for the British, says the De Lamar Nugget, all the same when the war is ended, cruel and prolonged as it may be, the result will be a stronger and wider grip of Great Britain upon South Africa. England has never let go her grip upon any territory in the world since the surrender of her army at Yorktown, and that was after a seven year's war with people of her own race and blood. With all her great resources and a grit that has not known ultimate defeat for six score of years, the loss of an army of twelve thousand men, though creating dismay, will never end in final surrender of her claims. The Union Jack will yet wave over the stations of a railway extending from Capetown to Alexandria.

Potatoes and eastern apples at the W. M. Co.'s store.

A Boer Napoleon.

The campaign of the Boers shows remarkable strategical talent. It is, of course, impossible to say at this distance as to who is responsible for their movements, but the man who mapped out the Boer campaign is a military genius. A short review of their tactics will prove this. Throwing apparently their strongest and best equipped commands into Natal, they diverted attention, and, before the British were aware of what was happening, Mafeking was surrounded by a part of Gen. Cronje's force. Then, when British attention was centered on Mafeking, Commander Allrich, with 8,000 Free Staters, crossed the border near Jacobsdal and surrounded Kimberley. This last was certainly a stroke of genius; for if Kimberley and Cecil Rhodes, who is cooped up there at present, should fall into the hands of the Boers, England would have to pay a ransom that would mean absolute independence for both the Free State and the Transvaal.—Collier's Weekly.

He Was Unappreciated.

"I had a peculiar case in court the other day," said a lawyer from a sister city. "An old Irishman named Callahan had gotten into a row with his landlord about some repairs and refused to pay his rent. The landlord was a fussy little ex-college professor, totally unversed in the ways of the world, and he was imprudent enough to send word that he would have the family evicted and then called to discuss it personally. He emerged yelling murder, and said that he had first met Mrs. Callahan, who told him her husband would do him no harm, upon the strength of which he waited for his return. When Callahan came in he promptly gave the visitor a beating. The old Irishman and I were both arrested, and I appeared for the defense. The ugly feature of the case was the alleged effort of the woman to lure her caller into a trap, but when put on the stand she denied the landlord's story in toto, and swore point blank she had warned him that her husband proposed to punch his head. Both parties seemed perfectly sincere in their statements, and I was somewhat puzzled. I finally decided to cross examine the ex professor. 'Now, repeat to us, I said, 'exactly what Mrs. Callahan told you in regard to husband?'"

"She assured me positively," replied the landlord, "that he had no intention whatever of molesting me."

"But she didn't say it in those words," I insisted, "what I want is the exact language."

"Well, sir," said the witness, beginning to get flustered, "she gave me to understand—"

"Oh, never mind that," interrupted the judge, "give us her own words."

"Very well, sir! Very well, sir!" exclaimed the little landlord, desperately. "She said: 'when Mike comes home he won't do a thing to you.' After the judge got through laughing he let the prisoner off with a reprimand."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.
