Quit Owen was in town Saturday and reports the completion of the six room addition to his house. The rumor that it had burned down is without foundation, and the story originated through the hot use of the tools in the hands of the contractors, Messrs. Richie & Smith, who have given Mr. Owen immense satisfaction.

There are about 2,000 head of cattle at the upper S-6 ranch that will be fed this winter on the immense stacks of hay that were produced there the past season. We are informed that 400 head will be fed on the Montgomery ranch and that the management has purchased several hundred tons of hay from the Christianson estate and Walter Fox.

Oh boys, oh boys! Friday, the 17th was a great day for them. A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Sam Englebard on that date and a big boy came to bless the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Roberts about the same time. Then, too, Charley Bryant was setting 'em up to his numerous friends in honor of the arrival of a little stranger at his home. The postoffice address of the parents in each of the above mentioned cases is Jackson, Mont.

W. B. and Will Stanchfield, father and son, were down the valley the last of the week. The former has recently returned from Bear gash, Madison county, where he has been representing on some fine quartz which he modestly expects to dispose of for $5,000 or $10,000 in the near future. The son, Will, returned last week from a visit to his wife's relations at La Porte, Ind. Mrs. Stanchfield has been at the old home at that place during the summer and fall, and now the gentleman and lady, their three-months-old baby, and her sister, Miss Belle Martin, are all domiciled at their ranch on Swamp creek.

DARING HOLD-UP.

Young Desperados Rob the A. D. & M. Store at Gibbonsville.

Last Monday evening a couple of young men held up Manager H. L. Holt and Clerk Chris Abel of the A. D. & M. store in Gibbonsville.

The desperadoes are well known. Their names are Dan Hawkins and Bert Hillman, the latter having worked in the company mine and the former was a helper in a blacksmith shop.

They had been to Salmon, where they hired saddle horses at Chet Matthewson's livery stable and arrived in Gibbonsville about six o'clock in the evening, hitched their horses in an alley, and at 6:30 held their guns on the men in the store. They were unmasked and very nervous and the store people were afraid the trembling weapons might go off. The thieves got about $100 for their trouble, but they expected a bigger haul, it being pay night.

While the work was being done Tom Barber and Budd Ricketts entered the store and gracefully backed when the revolvers were held on them.

When the robbers left the store Budd went in and got Mr. Holt's revolver, and going out on the street saw the hold ups coming out of the alley on horseback. At the same time they saw him and fired and he returned the compliment, but no one was injured, and Hawkins and Hillman rode up the gulch and evily got lost, as they stopped at A. L. Dean's place at Pioneer near eleven o'clock Tuesday night and got something to eat, and Ben Mallou saw them go by Moose Horn about midnight, when he happened to be up.

Ben and Tom Mallou, of this place, had been to the top of the Monday evening with loads and were just going into town when the shooting occurred. They were where the bullets were thickest, but happily were not in the way.

There was not a saddle horse to be had in Gibbonsville the night of the robbery and nothing was done in the matter until Tuesday morning, when Deputies Robert Hughes and C. McFaggert came over the hill in the hope of capturing them. Receiver Shaw has offered a reward of $200 for the arrest of the robbers.

Two deputies from Salmon came up the hill out of Gibbonsville Tuesday morning and went around toward Trail creek. Hughes and McFaggert went toward Divide Wednesday morning, and it would appear that the officers are somewhat previous.

Oscar McVay came to town last night and reports the two horses ridden by Hawkins and Hillman as among the loose stock near his father's place, and says the robbers were at Quit Owen's place Wednesday night for supper, and they are doubtless not far from Wisdom at the present writing.

Appendicitis Losing Its Grip.

Appendicitis was never heard of outside the medical schools, until a few years ago, and then the cases appeared as thick as blackberries in July. Surgeons were in their glory. The public began to ask if there was no alternative between death or a surgical operation. Finally the popularity of appendicitis as a fashionable and reclusive disease began to wane. It became a subject for the comic papers and fever cases of death or recovery from it appeared in print. Now it is announced that we may eat our grapes in peace, and perhaps by and by some scientist will discover that there never was any such disease, after all.—Washington Times.

JACKSON CORRESPONDENCE.

Jackson, Nov. 23, 1899.

Something did happen at this end of the Basin last Friday night that certainly established a record for Jackson and vicinity (and it wasn't the falling stars, either.) This record will cause the census taker to work an extra shift in this region. There were three babies born and boys—two middleweights and one heavyweight. The middleweights are seconded by Mr. and Mrs. Sam Englebard and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Bryant. The heavyweight held the edge by two pounds, weighing in at 12 pounds and will be looked after by Mr. and Mrs. George Roberts. They say he looks all the world like a sprinter. Everybody is getting on nicely—even the outsiders, for they are all smoking good cigars.

The school yard was marked by a few improvements the past week, and all seem more than pleased with the new teacher.

Charles Majers of this place and Mrs. Mary Merritt of Briston were married on Monday afternoon at the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. A. O. Shaw, the Rev. Miner officiating.

N. S. Staggs and Miss Ruby Sage were married in Dillon last Sunday and arrived home in Jackson Tuesday night. Their multitude of friends wish them much joy and prosperity.

All the boys about here have noticed a marked change in the conduct and appearance of our genial and witty Irish friend, Eues McDonald. For the past few weeks his step seemed lighter, his jokes brighter, and his mustache and hair seem to get extra attention, and we notice that he is practicing on a new youthful smile whenever passing the mirror. Now, Mc used to tell us a story about a girl of his in '89, but of course its nonsense to think of such things now, in this late day, and we hope we are mistaken in the symptoms. However, just look at what Dewey did.

Anton Jackson went out to Bannack to spend Sunday with his wife who is stopping there under the care of Dr. Lutz. He returned Monday and reports her improving slowly. Everybody sincerely wishes her a hasty recovery.

Mr. Fred Schlegelhuitch arrived Saturday and proceeded with a large supply of provisions to his mine on Swamp creek. This mine has elegant prospects and will be worked all winter.

Dan Tovey and family passed through Jackson last Saturday on their return trip from Malad, Idaho, where they have been visiting and looking over quite a bit of country. He said: "While that is a nice country, and along my traveled road, it only makes me more pleased with Big Hole and its prospects and I am glad and contented where I am."

Mrs. George Dart has returned from Dillon where she has been visiting with relatives.

The good shots roundabout Jackson are going to have an opportunity of drawing a bead on some fine, fat Turkeys here Thanksgiving Day, and along with a big dance in the evening we can't help but have a good time.

Duke Gist left for Dillon and Anaconda this week for a short stay.

The sad news came in Saturday that Sam Peterson's baby died at Dillon, while Sam is sick in bed.

Sora P. Nelson and Miss Lena Hirschy, two of the most popular young people in the Basin, were married last week at Dillon and passed through Jackson to his ranch near Fox. Last night the boys thought it highly proper to do the right thing by Ben and accompanied to the ranch with the necessary attire, and twenty-five of them didn't do a thing but vote for the populace in that district.
