We are willing to admit, however, that it does look peculiar for the church element and the tin-horn gamblers to be working together for the election of a couple of democratic candidates.

Ferg seems to be something of a Jonah himself. His man Mr. Wilcox for whom such a "gallant" fight was made ran up against some grangers in the south end—and they didn't do a thing to him.

George Taylor went over into the camp of the enemy and came within six votes of carrying the precinct, only to be shamefully slaughtered at home. Something must be wrong at Choteau and Dupuyer.

It did not wait until the next day to snow, and for some republican candidates it would appear that storm has been brewing for several months. Too much Magee.

With Connelly defeated by 14 votes and Webb elected by 125, it would seem that just a few republicans remembered the returns from Shelby two years ago.

We would suggest that George W. Magee act as chairman of the republican convention in Teton in 1904. He is certainly a vote getter—for the democrats.

"Vindication" is what Magee wanted at the hands of the republican party. He got it, but it cost the republican party the election of a portion of its ticket.

Now that election is over, let's put in the next two years all pulling together for the upbuilding of Teton county.

Hurray for Mitchell and Magee! They suited the weather beaten craft into the harbor of victory—NIT.

Mr. Wilcox, of Shelby, also ran.

The big city papers are overlastingly poking fun at the personal mentions made in country journalism, but after all the county papers never had the immediacy of the long tongue gossip as it is developed in the big city papers, only instead of their persons being to all alike they toady to the rich and influential. They poke their noses into the inmost secrets of the household and spare not the delicate events to be, around which there should be a sacredness not to be mentioned in print, even though the subject be rich and influential. The latest is that "a tiny stranger is expected to arrive at the White House in October." Just think if a country editor should put in print all the little strangers that are to arrive between now and January what a buzzing there would be about his ears.

A department store in New York announced in the newspapers of the city one day last month that it would give a stick pin with the class number on it to the children in every grade in the public schools if each child would mail a postal card asking for it. A hundred and sixty-five thousand postal cards were received in response to the advertisement, which seems to indicate, among other things, that when something is offered for nothing there is no lack of people ready to accept it. Incidentally, also, it suggests that advertisements are read, and that in turn suggests that advertising pays.

The professor of Latin in a New England school has, until within six months claimed that stories of New England dialect were absurdly exaggerated; but a few months ago a living refutation of his views arrived in the person of a New Hampshire maiden of stern aspect, who had been Wallace Taylor's Rooster.

A few days before the election—when Geo. C. Taylor's chances were better than they are at the present time for succeeding himself—the publisher of this paper promised one of Wallace Taylor's supporters that we would print a Wallace Taylor rooster in these columns in the event of his election—and here's the rooster. He's a proud little fellow and is crowing just as loud as he can. Of course, we would be much better pleased if it had been a Geo. C. Taylor crow, but as a majority of the voters of the county want it otherwise, we bow to the will of that majority. In extending congratulations to the victor we wish to inform him and the public in general that the good-will and cooperation of this newspaper is at his command for the enforcement of the law and the uplifting of the moral tone of this community. May your administration be as clean, fearless and as far above suspicion as has been your predecessor's.

engaged for general housework, says the Youth's Companion.

The professor's study is a good-sized room, and he is fond of plenty of air, he finds three windows and a door not more than sufficient to provide a current. When the new handmaiden had been in the family a week she passed through the hall one cool morning and stopped at the door of the study.

"Do you wish anything?" asked the professor, roused by a dry cough from the doorway.

"Well, I don't want to be forthputting," said the New Hampshire maiden in a firm, but pleasant tone, but it does seem as if you were setting in a complete draft. "Don't you want the door closed or the windows shut, or leastways the curtains drew?"

FOR SALE—Laundry, house and two lots in Choteau. Doing a good paying business. A bargain for the right party. Will be sold cheap for cash, or will trade for live stock. Address, C. P. Crain, Choteau.
