know MONTANA . . .

Gave Town Its Name

—from the White Sulphur Springs News

The town of Neihart gets its name from James LeRoy Neihart who discovered the silver mines there. He was of English and German descent and was born in William County, Ohio.

Stories of the West lured Neihart. In 1876 at the age of 25 he came to Bozeman. He taught one year of school then for two years he prospected around Virginia City and Alder Gulch.

In 1879 he moved to Fort Benton, then to the Highwood mountains where he located a squatters' claim 20 miles south of the fort. He stayed there until 1881 when he traded his holdings for cash and horses and struck out for Barker, then a booming mining camp.

Not accomplishing much at Barker, he pushed on through the gulch to what became the silver camp bearing his name.

The camp was in its heyday in 1891 and then of course suffered from the silver crash that followed.
