Twin Bridges Rancher to Head SW Stockmen Assn.

Mort Lott Jr., a Twin Bridges area rancher, was chosen president of the Southwestern Montana Stockmen's Association at the organization's annual meeting here Saturday.

Charles Ralston of Wise River was named vice president and Mrs. Don Shaffner of Dillon secretary-treasurer.

An estimated 65 stockmen attended the afternoon business meeting and elected nine directors to their 18-man governing board. These include Lee Martinell, Lima-Dell; Jack Hirschy, Jackson; Alex Christie, Grant - Horse Prairie; Vince Capp, Twin Bridges-Silver Star; Tom Foster, Sheridan-Ruby Valley; Ray Carkeek, Madison-Ennis; Dan Pendergast, Melrose-Divide; Charles Ralston, Wise River; and Arnold Benson, Dillon.

The stockmen heard a trio of prominent state speakers during their business session at the Elks Hall.

Wayne Brattin of Winnett, former president of the Montana Stockgrowers Association, warned the association members against the federal government's threatened "invasion of free enterprise in agriculture" and urged stockmen to organize in order to prevent the West from "being turned into a big national playground supported by tax money."

W. J. Everin, director of the Montana Fish and Game Commission, outlined game management objectives of his department for both public and private lands and noted that the commission now owns approximately 60,000 acres of winter game range and leases an additional 48,000 for this purpose.

Dan Fulton of Ismay, chairman of the State Board of Equalization, presented an illustrated talk on difficulties faced in determining fair assessed valuations on agricultural lands.

Fulton assured the stockmen that efforts are being made to arrive at net capital values of lands rather than basing assessed values on current selling prices.

Over 200 stockmen and guests attended the banquet Saturday evening at the Elks Hall.

Bill Garrison, outgoing president from Glen, presided over the annual gathering.
